SARAH JESSICA PARKER

Amagansett resident Sarah Jessica Parker is set to participate in a virtual Hocus Pocus reunion with co-stars Bette Midler and Kathy Najimi on October 30. The event, "In Search of the Sanderson Sisters: A Hocus Pocus Hulaween Takeover," is hosted by Midler as part of her annual Hulaween fundraiser. The evening is "your ticket to the hottest pandemic-safe Halloween event of the year, featuring Bette Midler, Sarah Jessica Parker, Kathy Najimi and spectacularly spooky guests—all to raise funds for New York Restoration Project's critical environmental and social justice work." In 1993's Hocus Pocus, Parker, Midler and Najimi played three wacky witches killed during the Salem witch trials that are resurrected in modern day when a group of teens accidentally light a cursed candle. The film is known for its campy, tongue-in-cheek tone and features a show-stopping rendition of "I Put A Spell On You." A sequel to the film is currently in development, with Adam Shankman directing for the Disney+ streaming service.

Well, it's official. Black Widow, starring Amagansett resident Scarlett Johansson, has been pushed from its November release date to May 7, 2021, Variety reports. Also pushed is East Hampton resident Steven Spielberg's much-anticipated remake of West Side Story, written by Tony Kushner. That film has been delayed a full year, to December 10, 2021. A Sag Harbor doc filmmaker Robin Leacock had an anniversary screening of her inspirational A Passion For Giving over the weekend at the Southampton Arts Center. The socially distanced outdoor showing drew an overflow (but still six feet apart) crowd that included GE Smith, Ron Delsener, Peggy Siegal, Candace Bushnell and Luann de Lesseps. Hosts Jean Shafiroff, Missy Hargraves and Henry Buhl chatted about giving.

SOUTH O' THE HIGHWAY SPOTLIGHT

“ I loooooove the Hamptons,” coos actress Lena Olin. “I’ve loved it from the first time I went there years ago. We’ve rented in the Hamptons. Unfortunately, I don’t own anything there. I wish I did. It’s such an extraordinary place.”

The star of iconic films like The Unbearable Lightness of Being was here two years ago—in the off-season—shooting The Artist’s Wife with Bruce Dern. It premiered at the Hamptons International Film Festival last year. The struggling-with-dementia drama was filmed in an East Hampton estate and features a lot of Hampton’s exteriors (even a few Citarella bags) for local flavor. The Olins like it here after Labor Day, she says. “I’ve been there in the summer a lot, obviously, we have a lot of friends there. But I think that whole experience of spending so much time off-season when we did the film was really great.” Lena and husband, writer/director Lasse Hallström, have been spending the pandemic indoors. Creativity ensued.

“We’re writing a script that I’m going to be involved in,” says Olin. “We’ve had a creative, fun space in our life where we can devote a lot of time to that. It’s about a Swedish painter who died in 1946. It’s called Hilma because her name was Hilma af Klint.” Sadly, no Hamptons locations are called for this time. And besides writing a new script, safely tucked away in their Bedford, NY home, Olin is happy about one thing these days: “We’ve been lucky because we’re healthy and our family is healthy.” The Artist’s Wife began streaming on September 25. THE ENTRANCE TO THE FORMER BOEING MICHIGAN AERONAUTICS RESEARCH CENTER MISSILE PROPERTY, NOW USED BY VARIOUS SUFFOLK COUNTY AGENCIES.

While Report Complete, Investigation at Former Westhampton Missile Base Far From Over

BY TAYLOR K. VECSEY

The Suffolk County Department of Health Services submitted a report earlier this month summarizing the results of groundwater and soil sampling at the former Boeing Michigan Aeronautics Research Center missile facility in Westhampton, though the investigation is far from over.

In December 2019, the county received word that state officials are considering the former military complex a potential inactive hazardous waste disposal site that poses a significant threat to public health or the environment, otherwise known as a "Superfund" site. "If additional investigation determines this to be true, the property will be listed on the New York State Registry of Inactive Hazardous Waste Disposal Sites," the county said.

From 1959 until 1964, the U.S. Air Force operated a missile base as one of 10 Boeing and Michigan Aeronautical Research Center facilities protecting the East Coast from a potential Soviet air attack. Fifty-six nuclear-tipped missiles were located at the facility, according to the health department, and, after the property was decommissioned in 1969, it was turned over to Suffolk County. The county has since used the property for storage of vehicles involved in serious accidents, as a law enforcement shooting range, and as a vehicle training course for emergency responders.

Residential properties back up to the 90-acre property, which includes 13 commercial buildings and the former surface-to-air missile 58 aboveground silos, the shooting range, a power plant, several acres of vehicle storage and multiple acres of undeveloped land. The Suffolk County Police Department, the Suffolk Sheriff's office, the county Public Works department, and various tenants use the property. Ten buildings are currently vacant.

In 2018, the Suffolk County Legislature directed the health department to inspect the property further and begin preliminary soil and groundwater testing to determine if there are any health or environmental issues that may require remediation. 🐾

Southampton Village Administrator Steps Down at Mayor's Request

BY TAYLOR K. VECSEY

RUSSELL KRATOVILLE STEPPED DOWN THIS WEEK.

Just a week after the Southampton Village election, Russell Kratoville, the village administrator, clerk and treasurer, stepped down at the request of Mayor Jesse Warren.

Kratoville joined the village in February 2019, when Mayor Michael Irving was in office, to fill Stephen Funsch's role upon retirement. When Warren was elected that June, he neither officially reappointed nor dismissed Kratoville, though he looked to replace him twice.

For the mayor to remove Kratoville from office, it would have required a vote of the village board in appointing someone to the position. In the September 15 village election, delayed three months because of COVID-19, Joseph McLoughlin and Gina Arresta were voted into office and Warren seemingly gained support for finally removing the administrator.

On Thursday, September 24, they "had a pretty frank discussion," Kratoville said. He made the decision that it was best for him for personally and professionally to resign "instead of just having more animosity and more stress."

"I give Russell a lot of credit. He did what the board asked him to do. He knew we wanted to go in a different direction. He was very gracious and he resigned," Warren said on Friday, September 25. The mayor would only say that it is customary for a new administration to bring in his own people.

Warren also got rid of two village attorneys last year and abruptly dismissed his executive assistant, Julie Fitzgerald, in July. Warren plans to propose splitting the positions up. He will appoint Charlene Kagel-Betts, the chief auditor for the Town of East Hampton, to the position at the October 1 organizational meeting.

Kratoville has had a nearly 25-year career in government. 🐾

One Week, Two Arrests That Will Have Critics Pointing to Bail Reform

BY TAYLOR K. VECSEY

A 21-year-old man freed following a burglary in Bridgehampton took part in a violent robbery in Jamesport just days later, police said.

Oscar N. Mayen Orrego was back in police custody Sunday night, September 27, after he and two other men reportedly hit an attendant over the head with a metal object at the Valero gas station in Jamesport and ran off with cash from the register Sunday night.

Riverhead Town police said Orrego, Ludwin G. Perez, also 21, along with a third man who has not been apprehended yet, robbed the gas station on the corner of Route 25 and South Jamesport Avenue at about 8:50 p.m.

When police received the report, they were given the description of three Hispanic men who had fled in a two-tone Chevrolet work van south on South Jamesport Avenue, then west on Peconic Bay Boulevard.

The van crashed into a building on Meeting House Creek Road and the occupants fled, but police said they caught up to Orrego and Perez. Officers called in the Southampton Village police K-9 unit to assist. Evidence and the cash taken from the gas station was found at the crash scene, according to police.

Meanwhile, the gas station attendant was treated for a head and arm injury at Peconic Bay Medical Center in Riverhead and released.

A GAS STATION ATTENDANT AT THE JAMESPORT VALERO WAS HIT OVER THE HEAD WITH A METAL OBJECT DURING A ROBBERY ON SUNDAY NIGHT.

TAYLOR K. VECSEY

Orrego and Perez, both of whom live in the Riverside-Flanders area, were charged with robbery in the first degree, a felony. Orrego has racked up a slew of charges in the past year. He has been charged with giving fake names, and earlier this summer, he was arrested for an alleged string of thefts from parked cars in Quogue Village. Then on the afternoon of September 23, a Bridgehampton woman came home to find him inside her house. When police arrived and confronted him, he jumped out a second-story window and took off. The Southampton Village police K-9 unit was also called in and helped officers find Orrego. At least one officer was injured in the chase.

Under New York State's bail reform laws, Orrego had to be released without any bail set because he was charged with what is considered a nonviolent felony. He was released on his own recognizance, Southampton Town police confirmed. First-degree robbery, however, a violent crime, required bail be set. Both defendants are being held on $150,000 bail each, according to Riverhead police.. 🐾

East Hampton Village Quietly Celebrates Centennial

BY TAYLOR K. VECSEY

It was not the celebration the village had planned for, but officials marked the centennial of East Hampton Village's incorporation nonetheless on Friday.

Assemblyman Fred W. Thiele Jr. presented a proclamation honoring the village to newly-elected Mayor Jerry Larsen. Paul F. Rickenbach Jr., who served as mayor for 20 years until resigning in December, was also on hand.

Thiele co-sponsored a legislative resolution with Senator Kenneth LaValle to mark the momentous occasion. He presented the village officials with a signed copy of the resolution during a presentation outside of Village Hall in a small gathering in compliance with COVID-19 regulations.

On September 25, 1920, residents voted, by a margin of 166 to 57, to break away from East Hampton Town, according to the resolution, which continued, "today, it is a center of the summer resort and upscale locality at the East End of Long Island known as The Hamptons and is generally considered one the United States' most beautiful areas, with miles of white sandy beach."

The village had big plans to mark its centennial that the novel coronavirus pandemic waylaid. The hope is to reschedule them for 2021. 🐾

Trouble

Southampton Mayor's Feud Leads to Eviction Struggle

BY DAN RATTINER

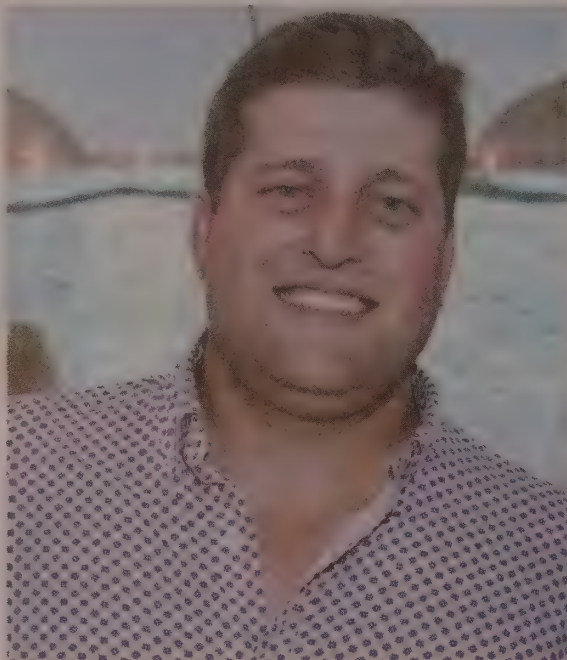

You think the presidential election coming up shortly will be a big deal? What just happened in our local village elections will make the coming presidential election look like FDR's landslide over Alf Landon in 1936—a walk in the park.

In Southampton Village, a loser in the election is the son of the owner of the house where the current Mayor lives, and that landlord filed papers to force him out when his lease is up in November. It's against the law in Southampton to be mayor if you don't live there. Will Mayor Jesse Warren, without a home, be forced to resign, thus overturning the election results?

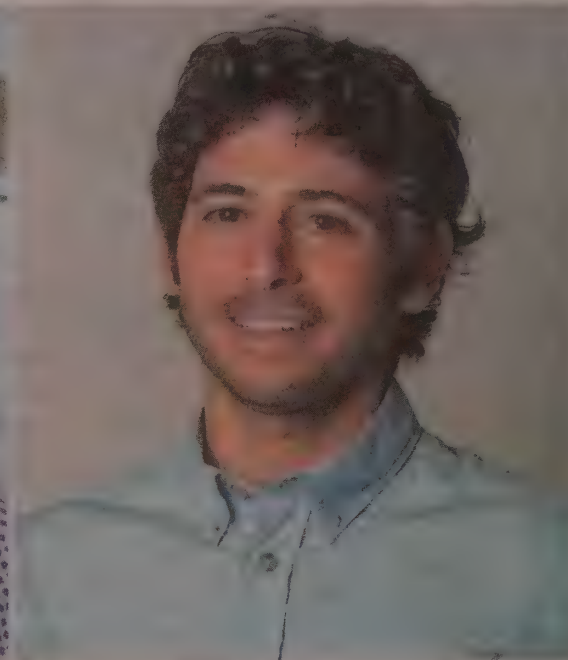

As for the loser, he is freely telling people that this is a deliberate act. He told The Southampton Press that he and his father (who used to be mayor) cannot abide Jesse Warren living in the house after Warren said such bad things about their family during the run-up to the election.

Before we get to Southampton, however, let's look at what happened on Election Day in East Hampton Village the week before. Three people were running for mayor there. One of them was a former police chief, Jerry Larsen. At a certain point during election day, Larsen learned that one of his two opponents had been, as he put it, "attempting to act as a poll watcher and remaining in the polling place all day," according to The East Hampton Star. This opponent said he was not acting an official poll watcher, but was only looking on as people voted. Yet he was also contesting people at the site who he thought might be voting illegally. One of the voters challenged was Bernie Kiembock, the owner of Village Hardware on Newtown Lane. Bernie actually lives in a nice house in Napeague, well outside the village. But as he owned the store, he was using that address as his residence and thus could vote in the village election. Isn't that okay?

Keep in mind that the village has just a few thousand residents in it. Each candidate might get just a few hundred votes. Everybody knows everybody.

ZACH EPLEY

MAYOR JESSE WARREN

GONZALO MARROQUIN/PMC; COURTESY JESSE WARREN

As the night of vote counting wore on and this business was continuing, Larsen called his lawyer, who immediately filed paperwork to have all the votes impounded. But then the accused "poll watcher's" plan collapsed. The count showed he was way behind. So, he gave up and withdrew his objections. Larsen, who then won, withdrew his order to impound all the votes.

The story in Southampton is a bit more complicated. The village government consists of the mayor and four trustees, all four of whom prior to the election were blocking Mayor Warren's plans. But now there were two trustee seats up for grabs and four people running for them. If Warren's two colleagues could win those two seats, he'd have a majority. And that's what happened. Game over. Or was it?

One of the two losers was Zach Epley, son of former Mayor Mark Epley. During the summer, the house in which the mayor was a tenant was being sold to the Epleys. In fact, he went to the media, fearing they were going to force him out. It seemed ridiculous. But apparently it's not ridiculous. He just got the goodbye paperwork.

This brings to mind a situation from 15 years ago. In another Southampton Village election, a sitting trustee, whose Tuckahoe property was partially, by a few feet, inside the village, was challenged about that as a new election loomed. Soon it was determined that a friendly surveyor had made that property line budge a little bit to make him a part of the village. He withdrew.

So where is Mayor Jesse Warren supposed to live? Rents have skyrocketed this year with people from New York City gobbling things up. The mayor owns a store. He's not rich. How can he compete for a village rental?

I have a suggestion. Just maybe he could, like Bernie Kiembock in East Hampton, declare himself a citizen by sleeping on a cot in the back of his store. Or here's another idea.

About 20 years ago, the weekly Manhattan newspaper West Side Spirit sent a reporter out to Jobs Lane to sit on the sidewalk, put out a cup and beg for spare change, and then, when it got dark, go to sleep there on a blanket.

The cops woke him up. Said you have to move along. You can't sleep on Jobs Lane. So he got up and left and then he wrote a story about it.

But the cops were wrong. There's no law against that. Poor reporting is what it was.

So the Mayor could do that if he wanted to. And there is nothing more "Southampton" than living on Jobs Lane.

Certainly, we can all agree on that. 🧢

“So where is Mayor
Jesse Warren
supposed to live?
Rents have skyrocketed
this year...”

The Fate of Stargazer Uncertain Once More

BY ERIC FEIL

The skeleton is almost laid bare, a daunting site here where many will tell you that the real trip to the East End begins.

At the southern point of Route 111 in Manorville, a quarter-mile north of Sunrise Highway, the red giant rises 50 feet toward the heavens. Stargazer. The deer looking skyward, an antler in its mouth, has for some three decades now welcomed multiple generations of Hamptons-bound travelers and then bid them farewell on their return journeys to points north and west. It is as much a part of the local fabric as the Montauk Lighthouse and the centuries-old windmills that dot the landscape.

Over the years, this creation of artist Linda Scott, who died in 2015, has weathered assaults by vandals and nature alike, but the surprise late-August storm that knocked out power across Long Island inflicted some of the worst damage Stargazer has endured in years. It is enough to pose a chilling question: Can it recover this time?

There is an indisputable danger to pulling off the road here, but parking on the side, stepping out of the car and standing in Stargazer's shadow, the smell of grass rising from the farm on whose earth the sculpture stands, is the best way to embrace the power of this piece. Truth be told, there may be a greater danger in not taking even the briefest of time to feel its strength and its vulnerability.

And, in turn, the passion of those who love it, most notably David Morris, Scott's partner and the engineer who helped build Stargazer in 1991, who has taken on the task of preserving both the physical structure and its legacy through fundraising efforts and hands-on work. Back in 2017, with the help of such donors as Taylor Plimpton, Barbara Slifka and Ben Black and Jarred Kessler of EasyKnock, and the efforts of the Arete Living Arts Foundation to help set up a nonprofit status, Morris raised enough money for the Stargazer Restoration Project to make repairs and give a ray of optimism as the summer season began. At the time, he noted that a full overhaul was ultimately necessary, from the frame to the siding to a new waterproof acrylic stucco coating. Today, he finds himself and Stargazer at a crossroads.

"I don't know really what to do, which direction to go," Morris admits. "I'd like to fix it, but I have a year-to-year lease. The property owners never charged me for the property until a couple of years ago, and it's a year-to-year lease. I don't know how to raise money on a year-to-year lease. I just had a discussion last week and they said they would talk about it, and I haven't heard from them.

"I am really reluctant to go and raise money," he continues. "It's going to take about $100,000 to re-do the whole thing—and the whole thing needs to be done, but I can't do it on a year-to-year lease. I want them to guarantee me at least 40 or 50 years if I'm going to build it, because I have to go and get the general public's money. If I go and fix it and I have a year-to-year lease, and they want to sell the property, we'd be in a mess."

Morris says the steel fabricator who has worked with him on the sculpture noted that the Town of Brookhaven "owns some property opposite, on the other side of the highway. He said you basically have to rebuild the whole thing anyway, so worst case scenario, if Brookhaven agrees, we could move it across the street, so instead of facing west it would be facing east. That way, the town of Brookhaven would own the property and I could donate it to them and they could keep the upkeep going. So that's where we are."

Donations can still be made at LindaScott.org. A sign remains planted in the ground in front of the sculpture denoting EasyKnock's support from three years ago, and Morris says they "are gung-ho to help me raise money. [They've] been there to do it, but I just can't pull the trigger to go raise money yet until I get the lease. I asked them basically a year ago to make an extended lease, and they said they'd have meetings and talk about it, and it just keeps going on."

Iconic elements of the East End, what feels timeless and eternal, are also fragile and can be gone in an instant. There are stewards, like Morris, who truly understand their worth, who comprehend the effort it takes to preserve them but also what makes them truly special in the first place, the source of the joy they bring.

Morris can't help but laugh out loud when he thinks back on the source of Scott's inspiration. "She loved quantum physics," he recounts. "This was a stargazer and, she said, a connection of the above and below. She said, it's really cool, we're really stardust. She said stars are nothing but hydrogen and helium that it takes a supernova to explode, and that's when the other elements are made, and finally everything comes down and forms planets and meteors and everything else. And she said the most beautiful part of the whole thing is, it's made out of energy but it's conscious energy, otherwise nothing would have consciousness here."

He laughs again. There's hope in the sound.

"She just loved looking at the stars and going, 'We're stardust. Everything's stardust.' This was just a representation of that. Look to the stars. We're connected to them. We are them." 🐾

looking at the stars and going,
‘We’re stardust.
Everything’s
stardust.’”*

HIFF World Premiere to Showcase Harry Chapin's Long Island Humanitarianism

In this world, there are a rare few people who are such a powerful force for good that wherever they go, they leave people feeling inspired and motivated to do some good of their own. In Harry Chapin: When in Doubt, Do Something, set to make its world premiere at the Hamptons International Film Festival next week, it's evident that the late Long Island music icon was one of those people, and director Rick Korn was profoundly moved by his humanitarian message.

On a seemingly normal school day in 1974, Chapin came to Korn's Plainview high school to perform a two-hour concert and teach the students about the hunger and poverty plaguing the world, and it opened the eyes of the future documentarian. "It was the best class I ever went to! It was entertaining; it was informative; it made me realize that there's a world bigger than the town that I live in and that we're all one," Korn remembers. "What could I do in my life? I wanted to live up to that idea!" He adds that executive producer S.A. Baron was similarly inspired by Chapin's visit to Lawrence High School, also on Long Island.

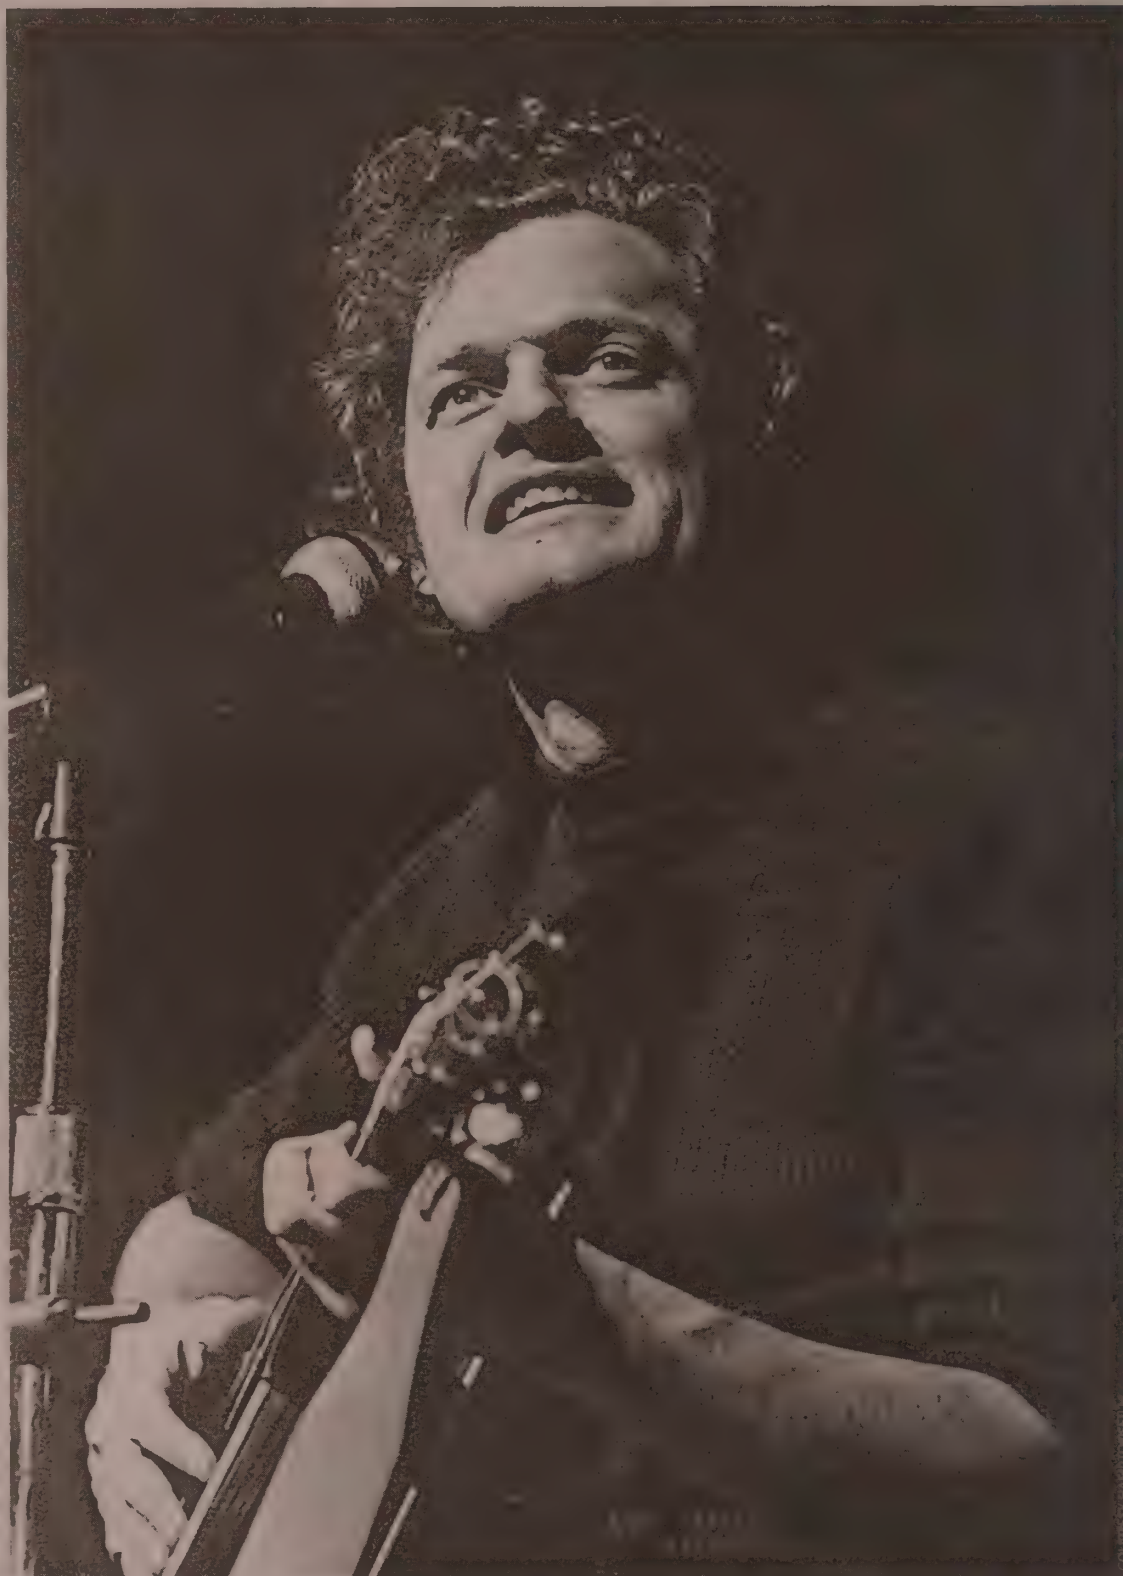

In the late '90s, Korn interviewed Radio DJ Bill Ayres, who co-founded the WhyHunger organization with Chapin in 1975, for an unrelated documentary and a thought occurred to him, "I said to Bill, 'How come no one's ever done a documentary on you and Harry?' And he said, 'I don't know. Why don't you do it?'" And so, Korn set out to do just that, later presenting Chapin's wife Sandy and son Jason with a treatment so well received that he was able to film Sandy's interview for the documentary that same day. "She's just an incredibly brilliant woman who has kept up the charity all these years," Korn notes.

Chapin was an award-winning songwriter beloved by millions for hits such as "Cat's in the Cradle" and "Taxi" and for his lifetime of humanitarian work, founding WhyHunger, Long Island Cares and the Harry Chapin Foundation before his fatal car crash in 1981, cutting his selfless life short at the age of 38. "Particularly now because of the pandemic—though we obviously started this film before the pandemic—it highlights how important Harry was to humanity," Korn says. "Harry got his hands dirty. He didn't just do a concert and talk about it; Harry really dug into what the real causes of hunger and poverty are and created programs that teamed up with President Carter and other bipartisan politicians to create programs that are helping people to this day."

Chapin's charitable work to tackle the problems of hunger, poverty, gender inequality, climate change and more inspired many to follow suit, including fellow music icons. "The thing that really surprised me is how loved Harry was by his contemporary music artists, like Billy Joel. That interview surprised me, because I knew they obviously were connected and they were friends, but I didn't realize how close they really were—and I would say the same thing for people like Pete Seeger and Bruce Springsteen. I could go on and on of the people who were influenced by Harry, both musically and through his philanthropic efforts," Korn says. "Just look at all the brilliant people that he inspired in his really short lifetime! That's what we're trying to do—carry Harry's message forward in that regard."

In researching Chapin, one detail that took Korn by surprise was that he is related to the documentary-pioneering Leacock family and even received an Academy Award nomination for his boxing documentary Legendary Champions. "I better understood how and why he created the music he created, because his songs are like mini films," Korn explains. "From a creative standpoint, stylistically, I got him instantly."

Korn's uplifting documentary stands out from other musician biopics for its focus on the artist's virtues, not vices. "I wouldn't do a music artist film about their vices, which tends to sell," Korn says. "You end up disliking the person at the end of it. We wanted to create a film where people walked out feeling totally inspired."

HARRY CHAPIN PERFORMING

He continues, "One of the reasons why we wanted to launch this film before the election is to give an escape to people. When you look at all of our lives during the pandemic and what's going on politically in this country—it's been a rough year... We're all attuned to the news and what's going on in this country; there's so much anger and divisiveness in this country. We really just want to give people 93 minutes of entertainment, enjoyment and inspiration, and Harry is the great communicator of that." 🎧

HONORING the ARTIST

Arts & Entertainment

This Week's Cover Artist: Carol Luz

Dan's Papers readers are very familiar with artist Carol Luz and her famous dogs, Judy and Elroy. This week, Judy and Elroy visit a cottage in Quogue, while Luz discusses the inspiration for the piece, how she creates her whimsical art and more.

What was the inspiration for this piece?

The inspiration for my piece, "Meeting the Neighbors," was Norman Rockwell's art-directed photograph for Kodak, "Closing a Summer Cottage" shot by Ralph Amdursky and Charles Baker in Quogue in 1957. I used to always ride my bike past this house on my way to the beach. I always loved this house. I'm glad to see it is still there. This is a real "summer cottage." I had to add my dogs, Judy and Elroy, meeting a little bulldog.

Talk about your art style.

I would say my art style is whimsical. It is fun, lighthearted and wants to evoke happiness from the viewer.

Tell us about your artistic process.

My artistic process is working from photos that I put together like a puzzle. Some photos I take and some photos I find online. With this painting, I found the house and Volkswagen Beetle online. I photographed the dogs myself and then added all of the photos together.

If you weren't an artist what would you be doing?

If I weren't an artist I would probably be regretting that I wasn't an artist. I really don't know. It would have to be something creative. I wanted to be a fashion designer in high school. My art teacher talked me out of it. Imagine if I went that route—I could've been a major fashion designer! I'll never know!

What inspires you the most?

My two Jack Russell Terriers, Judy and Elroy, inspire me the most. They are from the same litter. We named them after the brother and sister from The Jetsons. I love putting them in different, unexpected scenarios and having a fun time. They are such characters. It's fun to capture that in my paintings. 🐾

Take a Hike on East End Trails

THE MONTAUK POINT STATE PARK IS LIKELY THE MOST ICONIC WALKING TRAIL AVAILABLE ON THE EAST END

According to the Mayo Clinic, the health benefits of walking are plentiful and include maintaining a healthy weight, preventing or managing various conditions—including heart disease, high blood pressure and type 2 diabetes—and increasing and improving bone and muscle strength, mood, balance and coordination. Getting a good walk can also do wonders for the walker's mental health. Walking has proven to improve self-perception, self-esteem, mood and sleep quality, and to reduce stress, anxiety and fatigue. It also clears the head, working out and clearing old ideas and making way for new ones. Any time not spent in front of the blue light of computer, television or smartphone screens is time well spent. And, yes, the East End has lots of places one can go to have a good walk.

Cedar Point County Park is a 607-acre preserve that offers gorgeous views of Gardiner's Bay, picnic areas, boat rentals, nature trails, surfcasting and camping areas. The Cedar Point Lighthouse, built on an offshore island, was once a guide for whaling ships. The 1938 hurricane transformed the shore, connecting the lighthouse to the mainland. Great for families, the park has a general store and snack bar. Cedar Point Road, Northwest Harbor

Laurel Lake Preserve, not far from the welcoming Laurel Lake Vineyards, is home to a 70-foot-deep kettle hole with a diverse fish population of bass, pickerel and perch. Along the looping two-mile trail are cedar, oak, dogwood and laurel trees. There's also a man-made irrigation pond containing frogs, toads, turtles and fish. The trail itself has diamond-shaped plastic blazes to help you along. 5145 Route 25, Laurel

Orient Point County Park in Orient has a half-mile hiking trail for bird watching, surfcasting and viewing the stunning Long Island Sound. 41425 Route 25, Orient

Shelter Island's Mashomack Preserve is a natural area edged in white by 10 miles of coastline. Experience magnificent scenic beauty in its almost 2,100 acres of tidal creeks, woodlands, fields and salt marshes—the breeding ground and nursery for the smallest links in the marine chain of life. The Pine Swamp complex at the western edge of the preserve has been designated a freshwater wetland of unique local importance by the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation. 79 South Ferry Road, Shelter Island

Sears Bellows County Park attracts hikers, horseback riders and bikers. Rowboat rentals and campsites are also available. Freshwater fishing is permitted, too. Bellows Pond Road, Hampton Bays

Mill Road Preserve in Mattituck is a 27-acre parcel located south of the Old Mill Inn. There are two main trails that wind through about nine acres of shrub and grassland and 18 acres of woodland. 1900 West Mill Road, Mattituck

Dam Pond Maritime Reserve in East Marion is a 36-acre reserve. There's a protected bay, scrubland, grasslands, tidal flats and woodlands. There's also a 1.2-mile trail that goes through the preserve. 11855 Route 48, East Marion

Stretching from Rocky Point to Montauk at 125 miles long, Paumanok Path is one of the most exciting hiking trail on Long Island, covering the various natural habitats and locations of the island. The trail was inspired by Stephen Talkhouse, a Montaukett Indian known for his 30-mile roundtrip hikes, but that doesn't mean you have to hike the whole length—the trail has several stations where one can hop on or hop off.

The Elizabeth A. Morton Wildlife Refuge in Sag Harbor is a 187-acre nature preserve that hosts a hiking trail that traverse through dense forests to rocky beaches. Though the best part of the refuge are its friendly winged residents, eager to eat out of the palm of your hand. 2595 Noyack Road, Sag Harbor

For a bit of a more touristy, sightseeing—and perhaps more strenuous—walk, head out to the Montauk Point State Park at a time when the rush hour traffic won't double your travel time. A great walk starts just north of the Montauk Point Lighthouse. There's a dirt path that leads down to the beach. Once you're down at the water, relax, take a deep breath and soak up the view. 2000 Montauk Highway, Montauk 🐾

Anchors Away with the Fire Island Ferry

AN UNFORGETTABLE TRIP BEGINS HERE

It's not the destination, the saying goes, it is the journey. Whether it was Ralph Waldo Emerson or some other sage who coined the phrase, they never rode a Fire Island Ferries Inc. boat across the waters of the Great South Bay, yet somehow they captured the very essence of the experience.

Heading out for Ocean Beach or Kismet, immersed in sunshine and salt air, one can almost forget where they are headed and from whence they came. The ride is the thing. "I think the ability to be on the top deck, the sun in your face and the wind in your hair, that's the attraction, that's the beauty of it," says Fire Island Ferries Inc. president Tim Mooney, whose family has been involved with the company since it began in 1948 and now owns it outright. "Friday nights, everyone coming from work, and as soon as they got down here, this is when vacation started, or this is when the weekend started, when you got on the boat."

For more than seven decades since his dad, Edwin Mooney Jr., joined the fledgling enterprise, Fire Island Ferries has traversed these waters. It has grown to a fleet of more than 30 boats and water taxis, providing service to more than 1 million people annually. Of course, things are somewhat different this year, but what remains constant is the dedication to service and a sense of family.

"The family aspect of it is really key," says Mooney, whose son and daughter have joined him on the job. "I feel that from the kids we hire through the captains, everybody here is pretty much home grown. They all started out as 16-year-old deckhands and worked their way up and stick with us. It's been an amazing experience.... The number of people who've met at the ferry company and got married, my father's lost count—it has to be 15 or 20. The fact that we've been able to retain so many of our employees for an extended period of time, it reflects on the company and the family business aspect of it."

That notion of family extends deep into the community. Over the years, Fire Island Ferries has been involved in everything from fundraisers to kids camps, donating rides and making deliveries for special events and always doing their part. This past August, the crew of the Fireball was recognized by the Coast Guard for its heroic actions in rescuing six people from a sinking ship. During the early days of the COVID crisis, they delivered groceries for free along the beach. "We had a water taxi, and one of the markets over there in Seaview, Wes Little's, you could call up, put your order in, and then on Tuesdays and Thursdays we'd send a water taxi over and meet you at the dock and deliver your groceries to you. That was just something we did."

Mooney is feeling a sense of encouragement these days and hoping that autumn offers an opportunity to help people discover the wonders that await on Fire Island, whether for a one-day visit or a longer sojourn.

"For the day tripper, the weather is traditionally still good through October," he says. "There are still quite a few shops and restaurants that will be open on the weekend, and this year there are even more staying open, with the people staying out there. I think you have an opportunity to still do just about everything, but it's just a much different pace."

"You can get parking, there's room on the boats, and over there there's not the hustle and bustle, so people will stop and talk on the street or on the walk and on the beach," he continues. "It's toned down quite a bit, but the sunsets are still great, the weather's perfect. This is just my favorite time of year to take a walk on the beach, take a few laps up there, pick up some shells—it clears your head out."

As for can't-miss aspects, the Fire Island Lighthouse pops first onto Mooney's list of attractions. "We always take our friends. Being able to walk to the top of that and look around, it's unbelievable. Sunken Forest is another, a nice nature trail out there."

The community of Ocean Beach, its quintessential Fire Island shops and restaurants offering Oktoberfest specials and plates filled with the day's catch, are also a "must-do," he says. "And quite honestly, the beach is the same for 32 miles, so once you get down to the ocean, you can walk 32 miles and nothing really changes."

But before you get to that ocean or dine on that ocean catch, there is the ride. For some, wide-eyed kids holding their parents' hands as they board, it's their first time on a boat, and Mooney may share a secret about where they should sit to best enjoy the ride. For others, it's just the ability to just kick back, kick off your shoes, enjoy 30 minutes of solace. On a warm day, there's a breeze in your hair and the sun on your face. But if you're lucky enough to board when the sun goes down...

"The glimmer and the glistening of the moon on the water and the lights across the bay seem to sparkle and flicker," Mooney says, a hint of romance in his voice. "I think the nighttime ride is special, and to take it all in is pretty amazing."

Don't Forget Your Mask: Dining Out(side)

When does the “new normal” become just...normal?

Over the weekend, my mother and I realized that the weather was too lovely to spend the afternoon inside watching British crime dramas and decided to go for a drive. As we were walking out the door, I glanced her way.

“Don’t forget your mask,” I said.

She was one step ahead, pulling a flowery pattern out of her bag. My mask was designed with a nerdy reference to the classic Twilight Zone episode “Will the Real Martian Please Stand Up?”

The first stop on our impromptu outing was to Lucharitos in Center Moriches. They took our names and we instinctively walked back to my car to wait for the masked host to come and seat us at an outdoor table. It was a full three minutes sitting in the car before my mother reminded me I didn’t need my mask in the car.

We waited 10 minutes before being seated and enjoyed delicious smoked duck tacos and queso while chatting about how nice Lucharitos’ outdoor setup was and then proceeded to gossip about family, friends and anything else a 30-something talks to his mother about over lunch. We automatically put our masks back on the few times the waitress came by to check on us.

After a lovely lunch, we drove to the North Fork. Our destination was North Fork Doughnut Company in Mattituck, where we stood in a socially distanced line to order artisanal doughnuts from the good-natured teens working the window. We took our doughnuts and cold brew down the road to Love Lane, found a bench under a tree and relaxed for a bit. Love Lane was lively and populated, and we eventually took a stroll around, window shopping.

We got back in our car and drove home. Again, my mother reminded me I didn’t really need the mask in the car. That evening, we ordered dinner via app, and I waved to the delivery man as he left the food next to the door before driving off.

Over the course of the day, several observations were made. “Wow, low gas prices!” I exclaimed throughout our drive. School billboards displayed “welcome back students” signs. On the LIE, there were various messages to “wear a mask.” Every store on Love Lane had a sign outside reminding patrons to be courteous and do their part to protect themselves and those around them.

It seemed to me that, after months of turmoil, the East End had started to settle into the reality of socially distanced life. The dining community, in particular, had adapted quite beautifully—Lucharitos’ staff was friendly, attentive and took pains to make everyone feel safe.

Now, let’s look forward to the day we can call an outing without masks “normal!” 🧢

Real Estate Spotlight

Is there a more exclusive spot west of the canal than Dune Road? This property, located at 706 Dune Road and listed by Lynda Packard at Douglas Elliman Real Estate, is stunning in its architecture and views.

706 Dune Road, The Numbers:

Listed at $4.195 million

4 bedrooms, 3 bathrooms

4,000 square feet

Built in 2001

"If you have a superb sense of style and love of extraordinary architecture, look no further," says Douglas Elliman Real Estate.

706 Dune Road features a fantastic modern-eclectic layout and design. The indoor pool is beautifully designed with an artistic ceiling above it, overlooking the bay outside. A wood-fired stove in the living room makes for a cozy option while still enjoying the outdoor view. A modern stainless-steel outfitted kitchen is the perfect place for anyone who loves to cook while still enjoying others' company. Another wow factor is an indoor atrium, a perfect spot to wind down after a long day. Or the family can relax on the mahogany deck and enjoy the sunset.

"Don't fret if you need to meditate or grow your own garden," says the listing, "as this house boasts a gorgeous indoor atrium as well as a two-car garage. If you want to head to the ocean, across the street is your private access to the ocean or meet friends at Pikes Beach just steps away."
